I Cor. ix. 25.

Every Man that striveth for the Mastery, is temperate in all Things : Now, they do it to obtain a corruptible Crown, but we an incorruptible.

THE Mastery which the Apostle here speaks of, is a Mastery in Swiftnes and Activity ; being an Allusion to those Games and Races that were celebrated among the Corinthians, in which the Victors were rewarded with Crowns and Garlands. And such were their Desires after these Victories and Rewards, that they who put in for the Prize, complied with all Regulations in Diet, Exercise, and the like, which might, by way of Preparation, improve the Strength and Activity; chearfully submitting to the strictest Abstinences, and denying themselves their most beloved Pleasures. Which is implied by the Apostle in the Text, when he says that they were Temperate in all Things, or, as it is more forcibly expressed in the Original, that they were resolutely Temperate and Regular; so as no Allurements could tempt them to Excess, no Hardships could break their Constancy and Resolution. Now, says St. Paul, if they do all this to obtain a corruptible Crown, much more should we Christians submit willingly and chearfully to all such Regulations and Self-denials as the Gospel requires, and not be drawn to Excess by any Temptation whatsoever, when we have in our Eye an incorruptible Crown, or an immortal Crown of Glory.

BUT though the Words may be very well taken in such Extent, as to signify an universal Government over our inordinate Appetites and Desires; yet it is plain the Apostle in this Place more immediately intends what was the chief Discipline in order to the Games and Races he alludes to, namely, a strict Regulation in Meats and Drinks. And the showing what are the proper Rules and Measures of a regular Use, will naturally lead Men to see the great Sinfulness of an irregular and inordinate Use of them; First, In itself; and next, In its Consequences and Effects.

BUT previous to the laying down of those Rules, it must be observed in general, that the Constitutions, Ages, and other Circumstances among Mankind, being so different from one another; nay, the same Constitution being so different from itself according to different Times and Seasons; there can be no one fixed Rule or Measure in this Point; because the same Proportion which to one Person is not a sufficient Nourishment, may to another be Excess. So that, what Proportion is necessary or convenient, what is within the Bounds of Moderation and what not, must in great Measure be left to the Judgment of every particular Christian, upon an honest and conscientious Regard in the true Ends of Eating and Drinking: Which are, 'The preserving of Life, 'The refreshing of the Spirits, and, 'The fitting and preparing ourselves for the Business of the Station wherein God's Providence hath placed us.'

1. First then, The first and most immediate End of Eating and Drinking is the Preservation of Life. For as God hath planted in every Man a natural Desire of Life, so this is the only Means he has given to support it; and if it is the Duty of every one to preserve and cherish the Life which God hath given, it is his Duty to use and apply the necessary Means of doing it. But to determine aright what Kinds or Proportions of Nourishment are requisite for that End, we must always remember, that it is Life we are to provide for, and not Luxury; that the feeding more liberally than Nature requires or can bear, is not the Way to preserve Life, but to shorten and destroy it; and that it is very sinful in itself, and very ungrateful ful and unreasonable in us, to suffer an inordinate Appetite to turn those very Blessings to the Destruction of Life, which God graciously gives us for the Preservation of it. Not as if Men were bound to live by Weight and Measure, or were presently sinful if they go beyond the Proportions which will barely support Life. For besides, that the Fixing of this is next to impossible, that the Fear of Transgressing would fill the Mind with perpetual Scruples, and take away the Enjoyment and Benefit of God's Gifts; besides this, I say, the great Guard and Caution which God requires at our Hands, is not so much to keep to the nice Proportion that will barely preserve Life, as to keep from that which will weaken and destroy it; and between the Proportions that will barely support Nature, and those that will overcharge it, there is a Compass and Latitude, within which we may innocently enjoy the Blessings of Heaven. For,

Secondly, ANOTHER End of Eating and Drinking is to repair and refresh the Spirits, when they are wasted or flattened by Thought and Business. It has pleased God to cloath our Souls with Bodies of a weak, heavy, and unactive Constitution; which cannot hold out under long Applications of any Kind, without growing faint and weary; and though in no Danger of a Dissolution, yet are languishing and uneasy. And therefore he has provided Meats and Drinks in the Nature of Remedies, to revive and refresh the drooping Spirits, and to give new Life and Vigour to the whole Frame. But then we must remember to use them as God intended them; not so as to lay-aside or supersede our natural Strength and Vigour, but only to assist Nature when we find her faint and drooping. We must not apply these Remedies till Nature calls for them; being either in a State of Hunger and Thirst, or else tired and overcome with Thought and Labour; nor, when Nature does call, must we apply them in larger Proportions than she requires, or larger than will fairly answer her Needs. It is Time enough to pour in Oil, when we find the Lamp begins to burn faintly, and it is sufficient, to pour in so much as may enliven but not smother the Flame. But if Men (either out of Luxury, or a Desire to please the Appetite and pamper the Body, or in Compliance with Custom and a Habit of Indulgence) will be continually refreshing Nature when she has no Need, or overcharging her when she has; this is a direct Abuse of the Blessings of God, not only clogs the Spirits, instead of refreshing them, but by accustoming Nature to these needless Aids, makes her forget her own Strength, and to be perpetually craving a Supply of those artificial Spirits: Till, by Degrees, Men have no more Power than the brute Beasts to resist those Importunities of Appetite, nor any Life and Vigour, but what they derive from those false Flames, which quickly expire in Coldness and Stupidity. This is the most wretched State into which human Nature can sink; or rather, a State which makes it cease to be human, and turns it into brutal. For what is it, in this Life, that more distinguishes Men from Brutes, than the Government of the Appetite?

and when that is lost, they are no longer Men, but Beasts in the Shape of Men. And yet so bewitching are the Pleasures of Taste, and so easily are Men's Appetites corrupted, that with a little Indulgence they will insensibly sink them into this miserable and almost helpless Condition. Which nothing can remedy or prevent, but a serious Regard to the Necessities and Conveniencies of Nature uninfected by Habit, and thereupon a stedfast Resolution to apply those Refreshments, only at Times when they are proper and needful, and in such Proportions as may make them a real Refreshment, and not a Burden.

Thirdly, A third End of Eating and Drinking, is, to fit and prepare us for the Business of the Station wherein God's Providence hath placed us. Every Man, whether he be High or Low, Rich or Poor, hath some certain Work or Business belonging to his Condition and Circumstances in the World. And as the Providence of God appoints the Work, so the Wisdom and Goodness of God afford us those Blessings and Refresh-

Refreshments, to enable us to go through it with Comfort and Success. From whence it follows, that one great Rule and Measure in the Enjoyment of those Blessings, is, to use and apply them in such a Manner, as may make them most subservient to the daily Business of our Calling and Profession. And this we do, when, in our ordinary Course, we make the Seasons of Eating and Drinking what they ought to be, only short Retreats from Business, and not the Business of Life; when we take Care, in convenient Time, to return to the Duties and Offices of our Calling; and to carry with us sufficient Understanding and Abilities to pursue it; and when, what we call the Unbendings of our Mind, which may be sometimes necessary, are rare, and without any Mixture of Riot or Excess. An Enjoyment of the Blessings of Life, within these Rules, is truly a Repairing of our Strength and Spirits, and a real Furtherance in our daily Business and Vocation; and being so, is a sober and temperate Use of our Meats and Drinks, and answers the End for which God gave them. But whatever is beyond these, is an irregular and sinful Use of God's Creatures; when those unnecessary Refreshments are long and frequent, and so consume much precious Time that might be usefully and beneficially employed, when Men have no other Aim in invigorating their Spirits by these liberal Enjoyments of the Blessings of God, but that they may spend them again in Mirth and Jollity; and when they are so far from designing them to be Preparatives to Business, that they cannot endure to think of returning to Business; or when their Excesses are such, as leave them neither Sense nor Reason to attend it. And this intolerable Expence of Time is greatly aggravated by the Expence of Treasure; which, in the richer Sort, is a Defrauding of their indigent Neighbours, who have a Title to their superfluous Wealth; and in the poorer Sort, is the Robbing of their own needy Families, which by the Laws of God and Man ought to be their daily and immediate Care. And both Rich and Poor will find, that these these are no small Aggravations of the Guilt of Gluttony and Drunkenness, when they come to give an Account of their several Talents at the Last Day. Nor will it be an Excuse, however commonly alledged, that they were unavoidably led to their Excesses by their Concerns in the World; since if they are not led to them by Inclination also, the Business and the Excess may be easily separated, and in many Instances are so, where there is a sober and virtuous Mind. And the proper Inference from your meeting with those Temptations to Excess in the Course of your Business and Dealings, is not to lay hold of that Pretence for a Cloak to your Intemperance, but to be very watchful against such Temptations, and to pray frequently and earnestly for the Grace of God to deliver you from them.

By attending to the three foregoing Heads, you will be able to judge, not only what are the proper Bounds of Sobriety and Temperance, and when it is that you exceed those Bounds; but also how great and heinous the Guilt of of that Excess is, and what a wretched Abuse of the Blessing of God : Not only in forgetting their proper Ends, but in perverting them to Ends directly contrary; in turning that to the Destruction of Life, which God gave for the Preservation of it; in making that the means of stupifying the Spirits, by which he designed to raise and refresh them; in transforming themselves into the State of Brutes, by the very Helps that he bestows for a more vigorous Discharge of the Duties and Offices of a rational Creature; and finally, in making that the Occasion of indisposing themselves for the Business of Life, which God graciously gives to support them under it.

SUCH is the Sinfulness of an inordinate Use of Meats and Drinks IN ITSELF, as it is a Perverting of the true Ends of the Blessings of God, and a shameful Abuse of human Nature; which was the first Point. But, besides this,

II. IT is very sinful in the EFFECTS and CONSEQUENCES; whether it be Luxury in Eating as well as Drinking, and and so devouring the Portion that belongs to others, and an Enflaming and Heightening of the Lusts and inordinate Desires; or an Excess particularly in Drinking, which according to the different Constitutions of Men, usually produces in some, a Spirit of Rage and Passion, and Cruelty; in others, Sullenness, Obstinacy and Ill-nature; and in most, great Folly and Indecency in Words and Actions. Not to enlarge upon the Effects of another Kind, which, though in some Measure accidental, are frequently heard of in the Midst of those Riots and Excesses, namely, Swearing, Railing, Fighting, and too often Murder. And all these are deservedly accounted so many Aggravations of the Sin of immoderate Drinking; being either such, as Men know by their own repeated Experience, to be the usual Effects of it, or such at least as they cannot but see they expose themselves to, as oft as a Provocation falls in their Way.

III. IT is with Regard to the Heinousness of this Sin, both in its Nature and Effects, that the Prophet Isaiab so solemnly solemnly denounces Woes and Judgments against it (Isa. v. 11.) Woe unto them that rise up early in the Morning, that they may follow strong Drink, that continue until Night, till Wine inflame them; and again, Verse 22. Woe unto them that are mighty to drink Wine, and Men of Strength to mingle strong Drink. And because the Men of Might and Strength in this Way, take a perverse Delight in overcoming their Neighbours, nay, are not ashamed to glory in it, as if they had won some mighty Prize; therefore another of the Prophets adds a third Woe (Habb. ii. 15.) Woe unto him that giveth his Neighbour Drink, that puttest thy Bottle to him, and makest him drunken also. And in the New Testament, we find the Christians who were guilty of this Vice, ranked amongst the most abominable Sinners, and adjudged to the heaviest Punishments. The Apostle, (1 Cor. v. 10.) reckons them with the vilest of Men, Adulterers, Fornicators, and Extortioners; and commands all Christians to avoid their Company, as a public Scandal to their Religion: And, to compleat

compleat their Doom, the same Apostle (1 Cor. vi. 10.) expressly mentions Drunkards among those who shall not inherit the Kingdom of God. A Judgment so terrible, and a Name so odious, as makes most Men unwilling to believe that they have any Concern in it, and to persuade themselves, that the Imputation of Drunkenness belongs to none, but such as make their Reason and Senses a daily Sacrifice to an inordinate Appetite. But as the Apostle's Caution is in that very Place, Be not deceived; do not reckon that your Enjoyments are therefore innocent, because you are able to go away with a tolerable Share of Reason and Understanding, which in many Cases is owing only to Custom or an uncommon Strength of Nature; but rest assured, that all Indulgences of this Kind, more than what Nature fairly requires, and more than what are a real Refreshment to Body and Mind, without Prejudice to Health or Business, are very sinful in the Eyes of God, and lay Men under the same Condemnation in Kind, though not in Degree, as Drunkenness itself does.

IV. But,

IV. But when we speak of Refreshments which Nature desires and calls for, we must carefully distinguish between the Desires of Nature before a Habit of Intemperance, and after it. Nature not vitiated with Custom or Habit, is easy and content with a reasonable and moderate Refreshment; but the Cravings of Nature under the Dominion of Habit (if we may then call it Nature) are unlimited and endless: The more they are indulged, the more eager they are, and never cease till the Senses and Understanding are drowned. They are as much a Disease, as Thirst in a Fever: and are no more to be gratified than that is; nay, (if the Matter be rightly considered) much less, as that is at most attended only with temporal Death, and the certain Effect of this is Death eternal. And yet, after this Habit is rooted and has got Strength, how willing are Men to indulge it, and how uneasy if they do not; which shuts their Eyes against the Unreasonableness on one Hand, and the Danger on the other. But at the same Time that they provide for their present Ease, and are pleasing themselves with their present Enjoyment, they should remember what it will bring forth in the End; that at the last it biteth like a Serpent, and stingeth like an Adder, as Solomon speaks of this Kind of Pleasure, Prov. xxiii. 32. In Truth, it is no better than the nourishing themselves for the Day of Destruction, and the laying up Fuel for the Flames of Hell.

V. BUT among the Miseries of this unhappy State, it is none of the least that where an inordinate Appetite reigns, Reason and Consideration are shut out; and when Men are reduced to such a thoughtless Condition, they generally go on, without any Sense either of their Sin or their Danger, and without any Aim or Desire beyond their present Enjoyment. Into which stupid State they are gradually sunk by repeated Acts of Indulgence; and nothing can awake them out of it, but a great Degree of Resolution, and the forcing themselves to reflect, ‘ Into what a brutal Condition their Indulgence has brought them; ‘ To what shameful Abuses of God’s Blessings, Blessings, and of their own Reason and Faculties, it has hitherto betrayed them; and To what Dreadful Punishments and Miseries it will certainly consign them at last. And these Reflections being frequently dwelt on, and imprinted more and more upon the Heart, may, by the Blessing of God, produce a happy Change, and deliver them out of the dangerous and miserable Course they are in.

VL BUT altho' Persons in this Condition may be brought to acknowledge, that it had been happy for Body and Soul, if they had fallen at first into a sober and regular Course, and that then, it is true, those Indulgences were so far from being necessary, that they were a Load to Nature, and by Consequence very sinful; yet now, that Custom has made them necessary, and Nature can hardly subsist without them, they think they may innocently go on; and to part with them is to part with Life.

UPON which I observe, That altho' Custom is very powerful, and perhaps no one more so than that we are now speaking of; yet has not Force enough to make that necessary to Nature, which of itself is destructive to Nature; as all Excess most assuredly is, whether with or without Custom. Nay, so far is Indulgence, in any Circumstances, from being necessary to Life, that when a long Course of it has brought Life into Danger, the leaving that Course is always the first Prescription, without which all other Remedies are useless and ineffectual. So that, what they say is necessary to preserve Life, is in Truth only necessary to quiet a craving and inordinate Appetite; the gratifying of which is at that very Time the direct and immediate Means of destroying Life. And as to the present Uneasiness, it is no Wonder that an Appetite unaccustomed to Denials, and which has long been gratified to the full, whenever it called, should be so uneasy under the first Check or Restraint. But if there is Steadiness and Resolution enough to maintain the Restraint for a little Time, and by that to give a Check to the Current of the Desires; the Appetite by Degrees will grow more patient and quiet, and they will find find far greater Pleasure in governing, than ever they found in indulging it.

VII. LET as many therefore, as have already indulged themselves into a Habit, stand still, and consider that they are in a State of the worst Kind of Slavery; a Slavery of Reason to Appetite, a Slavery of the Human to the Brutal Part. And let them resolve, once for all, to assert the Freedom and Dignity of their Nature, and that though they have lived like Beasts, they will die like Men. Let them, in a religious Way, look back and see how they have abused the Blessings of God to Luxury and Excess, and with how much Goodness he has born the Provocations and waited for their Amendment; and let a Sense of his Mercy and their own Vileness, breed in their Hearts that godly Shame and Sorrow, which worketh Repentance to Salvation: Or, if neither the Force of Reason and Religion will do, let the Terrors of the Lord persuade them not to trifle away their Souls, by continuing in a Course, which they know must end so shortly in eternal Destruction.

If

61 If they say it is a difficult Work, the proper Answer is, that it is a necessary Work; and if Men will but think, it can bear no long Consideration, whether they shall be uneasy now, or miserable for ever. Where that is the Choice, the true Inference from the Difficulty of the Work is, to rouse themselves to equal Degrees of Resolution to go through it; and the more sensible they are of their own Weakness, the more earnest ought they to be in their Prayers to God, to strengthen and assist them.

VIII. It must be owned, that the Condition of such Persons, though not desperate, is exceeding dangerous; and it were to be wished, that the Instances of Men's delivering themselves out of it, were more common than they are. But the more dangerous their Condition is, and the more rare the Instances of being delivered out of it, the more powerful Warnings are they to others, who are in a good Measure innocent, or as yet less guilty, not to be betrayed into the same Kind of Slavery, by Luxury and Indulgence. And the only Way

Way not to be betrayed into it, is to keep the Reins over the Appetite from the Beginning ; and to accustom it to frequent Restraints, that it may know it is always under Government, and so be tame and tractable ; or in the Language of St. Paul in this very Case, (1 Cor. x. 27.) to keep under the Body, and bring it into Subjection.

AND indeed, such Restraints and Self-denials are a necessary Means to preserve and secure Men's Innocence ; as they keep them not only from falling into Excess, but at a convenient Distance from the Brinks of it. For if Men suffer themselves to come into the Way of Excess, or go too near the Brinks of it, they will frequently lose the Reins and be plunged in unawares. So that there is no Way to be Safe and Innocent, but to keep an habitual Guard and Restraint upon the Appetite ; out of a due Sense, ' Of the true Ends and Uses of Meats and Drinks, ' Of the great Wickedness of abusing the Blessings of God, to the Dishonour of His Religion, and the Shame and Reproach of human Nature ; and, ' Of the unspeakable
Misery

Misery of living and dying in Habits of Excess, both in this World and the next. And, together with these Considerations, there must be frequent and earnest Prayer to God, that he will preserve upon the Mind a lively Sense of them, and graciously afford such Supplies of Grace and Strength, as he sees needful, to prevent those evil Habits, and to give an effectual Check to all such Acts of Irregularity and Excess, as naturally lead to them.

PART

P A R T II.

The pernicious Nature of Spirituous Liquors.

THUS far; Intemperance in Drinking has been considered in general, without any Distinction of the various Liquors by which it is occasioned; and, accordingly, the Cautions and Warnings against it have been also general, and such as equally relate to Liquors of all Kinds. But there is one Sort that deserves a more peculiar Consideration, as being attended with Circumstances more dangerous and destructive than the rest; I mean, that which is commonly distinguished by the Name of SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS. The rest of them, when under due Regulations and Restraints, are such, for the most Part, both in Kind and Nature, as are of necessary and daily Use, to answer the wise Ends of Eating and Drinking, which are enumerated above, viz. The preserving of Life, The repairing pairing and refreshing of the Spirits when they are wasted by Thought and Labour ; and, The fitting and preparing Men for the Business of the Station in which God's Providence has placed them.

BUT as it cannot be pretended, that Spirituos Liquors are necessary to Life, so, if they be tried upon the three foregoing Heads, they will be found upon every one of them, to be remarkably pernicious both to Body and Mind, and to have a more direct and immediate Tendency to the Defeating all the wise Means and Ends which God has appointed for the Support and Comfort of both.

UPON the first Head, ' The preserving of Life ;' Nothing can be more clear in Reason, than the quick Tendency of those Liquors to shorten and destroy Life : Not only by depraving the Appetite, and drawing on a Disrelish of wholesome Nourishment, as Experience shows ; but also as Physicians reason, by hardning the Provisions that are sent into the Stomach, and thereby hindring the Operations of those Helps which God has provided for a regular Digestion, and for a kindly Conveyance of Nourishment to every Part. Besides the other fatal Effects which are charged upon them by Physicians; as Palsies and Apoplexies, from their Operation upon the Brain and Nerves; and of Jaundices and Dropsies, from their Operation upon the Bowels.

UPON the second Head, 'The repairing the Spirits, when wasted with Thought and Labour :' Other Liquors when moderately taken, cherish the Mind, and enliven the Spirits; without calling for any further Recruits, till those are wasted again, by attending the Business of our Station. But the seeming Relief that the Spirits receive from the Liquors which we are now speaking of, is not only of short Continuance, but frequently runs into Frenzy and Madness; inflaming instead of comforting; intoxicating instead of enlivening. And as through such a violent and precipitate Consumption, the Spirits they give are soon spent; so do they leave the Body vapid and lifeless, and under an eager Longing after a speedy Recruit Recruit from those artificial Aids; which are so many Steps to the Grave, and do, in Truth, deserve no better Name, than a slow Kind of Poison.

UPON the third Head, ' The fitting and preparing Men to go through the Business of the Station in which Providence hath placed them: ' If, as has been shown, the Use of these Spirituous Liquors depraves the Appetite, and hinders the Digestion and the Conveyance of a regular Nourishment to the Whole; it cannot be, but that they must by the same Degrees impair the Strength, and enfeeble the Constitution, and make the whole Man weak and listless; less willing to set about Business, and less able to go through the Labour and Fatigue of it. Thus it must be in Nature, and thus it is daily seen to be in Experience and Observation.

THIS Trial of Spirituous Liquors, upon the three foregoing Heads, gives a short but clear View of the peculiar Tendency of them above all others, to obstruct and defeat those wise Means which God has graciously provided for the Support of Life, and the Preservation of Health and Strength ; and if any Doubt can remain, whether the foregoing Account, considered as the Result only of private Reasoning and Observation, may not be aggravated ; it will be supported to the Height by the many public Representations that have been made from Time to Time, of the sad Effects of those inflammatory Liquors : Some of which will therefore be subjoined, in an Appendix to this Discourse.

IN perusing those Representations, it will be observed, that the Mischiefs complained of do not All of them directly and immediately relate to the Morals of Mankind ; but some, to the Disturbances of public Peace and Order, which are frequently occasioned by those intoxicating Liquors ; and others, to the Damage which the Nation sustains by the Weakness and Feebleness they bring upon the labouring Part of it ; and others again to the deriving those Weaknesses and Infirmities to the next Generation. But though these may seem at first Sight to be Considerations only of a temporal Nature, and rather Insecurities to the Public, than Sinful in the Persons; it is to be remembered, that there are Duties, which God, the Author of Order and Government, requires of us, as we are Members of a Society, for the general Good and Welfare of the Whole; and that therefore every Neglect or Transgression of such Duties, becomes an Offence against God, as well as against Man, And People ought to be made sensible, that those Injuries done to the Public, being the manifest and well-nigh necessary Effects of their sinful Indulgences, will in God's Account be so many Aggravations both of the Guilt and Punishment of them. And however Persons in the married State, like many others, may not be much affected with the Injuries they do the Public, nor enough concerned about the Mischief they do to themselves; they are to be put in mind that in Them it is not only irreligious, but unnatural and cruel, to have no Sense or Feeling of the Weaknesses and Infirmities which they are entailing upon their innocent Progeny.

BUT the less Sense People appear to have of the Sinfulness of those Indulgences (in themselves and in their Effects ; against God and against Man ;) the greater Need there is for the Ministers of the Gospel, as they find Occasion, to use all Diligence in laying open the Sinfulness of them, and earnestly enforcing it upon the Minds and Consciences of their People. And the Need of this is still greater, if what has been frequently suggested be true, That it is Above the Strength of the Civil Power, to lay an effectual Restraint upon this growing Evil. For, whether it be curable or not curable in that Way, it is acknowledged on all Hands to be very pernicious in the Effects ; and being so, it cannot be denied on any Hand, that the less it is under Temporal Restraints the more Need there is of Spiritual Restraints ; Especially, when the Temptations lie so much in every one's Way ; and when the Appetite is gratified and the Brain intoxicated at so easy an Expence ; and when,

when, by little Indulgence, the Cure becomes so very difficult.

SUCH Considerations, one would hope, should of themselves and without any other Enforcements, be effectual Warnings to all PARENTS and MASTERS, to use their utmost Watchfulness over those who are under their Care, that none of them be ensnared by these Temptations in the Beginnings of a Distemper, which, when begun, is so hard to be cured.

BUT whatever Parents or Masters may think or do ; the Consideration of the great Danger of those Indulgences, to the SOULS of Men, as well as the great Difficulty of being reclaimed from them, must be strong Obligations upon all PASTORS to exert themselves in representing to their People both the Danger and the Difficulty ; in private as well as public ; to all Persons in general, Old and Young, Superiors and Inferiors, whom the Providence of God has put under their Care ; Endeavouring, at the same Time, to convince all such as are unhappily fallen into those Indulgences, of the Misery and Danger of their present Condition, both with regard to this World and the next; and to confirm all others in a stedfast Resolution to restrain the Appetite, and resist the Temptations; as upon other Considerations, so particularly upon that which St. Paul inforces in the Text, "That the greater Care and Watchfulness they use, and the greater Difficulties and Self-denials they undergo, in governing and subduing their inordinate Appetites, in their Passage through this Life; the greater will their Reward be in the Life to come."

APPENDIX.

Containing several Public Representations of the pernicious Effects of Spirituous Liquors.

I.

The great Mischiefs of Spirituous Liquors among the INDIANS.

IN the Books of the Society for propagating the Gospel, Mention is made of a select Committee at Lambeth, on the 22d of April 1710, to consider of the Address of the Indian Sachems to Queen Anne, &c. and they came to the following Resolution among others:

“ THAT it be recommended to the “ Governor of New-England and New- “ York, strictly to put the Laws in Exe“ cution against selling Rum, Brandy,
 “ and other intoxicating Liquors to the “ Indians, this being the earnest Requests
 “ of the Sachems themselves.”

II.

In the Abstract of the Proceedings of the Society for propagating the Gospel,
Ann. 1715, it is remarked as follows :

“ AMONG the Indians of the five “ Nations, a Stop hath been put to the “ so-much expected Progress of the “ Gospel, under the Conduct of our “ Mission from England, by debauch“ ing their Morals ; which is imputa-“ ble to some of our Neighbours, in “ promoting Riots and Excess, by the “ Sale of Rum so often prohibited ;
 “ and during which Traffic, all sober “ Endeavours used for their Salvation “ must be rendered utterly ineffec“ tual.”

“ ble, and distempered Children, who “ must be, instead of an Advantage and “ Strength, a Charge to their Country.
“ We crave Leave further most humbly
“ to represent, That this Custom doth “ every

“ every Year increase, notwithstanding “ our repeated Advices to the contrary.
 “ We therefore most humbly submit “ to the Consideration of Parliament “ so great and growing an Evil. In “ Testimony whereof, we have this “ 19th Day of January, 1725, caused “ our common Seal to be affixed to this “ our Representation.”

IV.

Preamble to an Act (2 Geo. II.) for laying a Duty upon Compound Waters, or Spirits, commonly called Gin, &c.

“ WHEREAS the Drinking of Spi“ rits and strong Waters is become very “ common among the People of in“ ferior Rank, and the constant and “ excessive Use thereof tends greatly to “ the Destruction of their Healths, e“ nervating them, and rendering them “ unfit for useful Labour and Service, “ intoxicating them, and debauching “ their Morals, and driving them into “ all Manner of Vices and Wickedness;
 “ the

“ the Prevention whereof would be of “ the greatest public Good and Bene“ fit; and whereas it is found by Ex“ perience, that the great Temptation “ to such licentious Use of these per“ nicious Liquors, is from the Cheap“ ness thereof, &c.”

V.

Preamble to an Act (9 Geo. II.) for laying a Duty upon the Retailers of Spirituous Liquors, &c.

“ WHEREAS the Drinking of Spi“ rituous Liquors or Strong Waters is “ become very common, especially a“ mongst the People of lower and in“ ferior Rank, the constant and exces“ sive Use whereof tends greatly to the “ Destruction of their Healths, rendring “ them unfit for useful Labour and Bu“ siness, debauching their Morals, and “ inciting them to perpetrate all Man“ ner of Vices; and the ill Conse“ quences of the excessive Use of such “ Liquors are not confined to the pre“ sent Generation, but extend to fu“ ture Ages, and tend to the Devas“ tation

“ tation and Ruin of this Kingdom, “ &c.”

VI.

*Preamble to an Act, to prevent the Importation and Use of Rum and Bran-dies in the Province of Georgia, Ann.
 1735.*

“ WHEREAS it is found by Expe“ rience, that the Use of the Liquors “ called Rum and Brandies, in the Pro“ vince of Georgia, are more particularly “ hurtful and pernicious to Man’s Body,
 “ and have been attended with dan“ gerous Maladies and fatal Distempers, “ and if not timely prevented, will in “ all Likelihood ruin the said Colony,
 “ and frustrate your Majesty’s good “ and fatherly Intentions, towards such “ of your Subjects as shall go to reside “ in the said Province : And whereas “ we your Majesty’s most dutiful Sub“ jects, the Trustees for establishing the “ Colony of Georgia in America, have “ received Complaints from the Chiefs “ of several of the Indian Nations in“ habiting near to your Majesty’s said “ Colony

“ Colony, of great Disorders amongst “ them, occasioned by the Use of the “ said Liquors, and which are brought “ them by the Persons using and carry“ ing on the Indian Trade: For Reme“ dy thereof, we the Trustees for Esta“ blishing the Colony of Georgia in “ America, humbly beseech your Ma“ jesty, that it may be enacted, and be“ it enacted, that from and after the “ Four and Twentieth Day of June, “ which shall be in the Year of our “ Lord, One thousand seven hundred “ and thirty-five, no Rum or Brandies, “ nor any other Kind of Spirits or “ Strong Waters, by whatsoever Name “ they are or may be distinguished, shall “ be imported or brought ashore, &c.”

And then it follows:

“ Which Act his Majesty thought proper to refer to the Consideration of a Committee of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, who having received the Opinion of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations thereupon, did this Day report to his Majesty, as their Opinion, That the said

said Act was proper to receive his Majesty's Royal Approbation. His Majesty taking the same into Consideration, is hereby pleased, with the Advice of his Privy Council, to declare his Approbation of the said Act, and pursuant to his Majesty's Royal Pleasure, thereupon expressed, the said Act is hereby confirmed, finally enacted, and ratified accordingly.

VII.

In a Presentment of the Grand Jury of the City of London, Ann. 1735.

“ WE the Grand Jury of the City of “ London, met at the present Sessions “ at the Old Bailey, to enquire of and “ present such public Nuisances as dis“ turb and annoy the Inhabitants of the “ City, think it our Duty to complain “ of the late surprising Increase of “ Gin-Shops, and other Retailers of “ Distilled SPIRITUOUS LIQUORS,
 “ which we have great Reason to ap“ prehend (if not restrained) will be “ attended with the most dreadful and “ lasting ill Consequences,

“ To

“ To this pernicious Practice is “ chiefly owing—— That our lower “ Kind of People are enfeebled and dis- “ abled, having neither the Will nor “ Power to labour for an honest Live“ lihood, &c.”

VIII.

*In a Presentment of the Grand Jury for the County of Middlesex, Ann.
 1735.*

“ WE the Grand Jury for the County “ of Middlesex, taking Notice of the “ vast Number of Brandy and Geneva “ Shops, &c. for the Retailing of Gin,
 “ and other Spirituous Liquors ; which “ being sold at a very low Rate, the “ meaner, though useful Part of the “ Nation, as Day-labourers, Men and “ Women Servants, and common Sol“ diers, nay, even Children, are enticed “ and seduced to taste, like, and ap“ prove of those pernicious Liquors “ sold for such small Sums of Money, “ whereby they are daily intoxicated
 “ and

“ and get drunk, and are frequently “ seen in our Streets in a Condition “ abhorrent to reasonable Creatures.—

“ IT is visible, that by this destruc“ tive Practice, the Strength and Con“ stitution of Numbers is greatly weak“ ened and destroyed, and many are “ thereby rendered useless to themselves “ as well as to the Community; many “ die suddenly by drinking it to Ex“ cess; and infinite Numbers lay the “ Foundation of Distempers which “ shorten their Lives, or make them “ miserable, weak, feeble, unable and “ unwilling to work, a Scandal and “ Burthen to their Country.”

IX.

In a Presentment of the Grand Jury of the Tower Hamlets, Ann. 1735.

“ WE the Grand Jury for the Liber“ ty of the Tower of London and Pre“ cincts thereof, think it our Duty to “ represent to this Court, the prodigi“ ous Increase in the Number of Shops,
 “ and

“ and other Places, for retailing Gin “ and distilled Liquors, and the many “ Enormities that are occasioned by “ its being drank by the meaner Sort “ of People in this Kingdom, chiefly “ because they can be debauched at a “ very small Expence.

“ It is with great Trouble that We “ observe the Number of Gin-Shops to “ multiply in every public Street.”

X.

In a Report made to the Justices of the Peace for the County of Middlesex, Ann. 1735-6.

“ It is with the deepest Concern
 “ your Committee observe the strong “ Inclination of the inferior Sort of “ People to these destructive Liquors,
 “ and how surprisngly this Infection
 “ has spread within these few Years.
 “ Not only the Vicious and Immoral “ give into this Practice, but those also “ who to all Appearance are in other “ Respects sober and regular: Not “ only

“ only one Person here and there in a “ Family ; but whole Families shame“ fully and constantly indulge them“ selves in this pernicious Practice; “ Fathers and Masters, Children as “ well as Servants.—

“ YOUR Committee proceeded to “ enquire according to your Directions “ into the Mischiefs arising from the “ immoderate Use of Spirituous Li“ quors; and more especially of Ge“ neva : And these, to their great “ Concern, appear to be of the highest “ Nature, and more lasting Consequen“ ces ; affecting not only particular “ Persons and Families, but also the “ Trade of the Nation, and the public “ Welfare. With respect to particular “ Persons, it deprives them of their “ Money, Time, Health, and Under“ standing; weakens and destroys their “ natural Strength and Constitutions; “ and thereby renders them useless to “ themselves, as well as to the Com“ munity. And when their Spirits are “ raised by drinking to Excess, they “ are often carried to a Degree of out“ ragious

“ragious Passions, and become bold
 “and daring in committing Robberies
 “and other Offences, for an immediate Livelihood.

“FARTHER, They who indulge “themselves in this pernicious Custom, “are hereby rendered incapable of hard “Labour, as well as indisposed to it;
 “their Health is ruined, and their “Lives by Degrees destroyed.”

XI.

In a Royal Proclamation, March 8, 1737, for putting in Execution the late Act against retailing Spirituous Liquors; the Introduction is as follows:

“WHEREAS, in order to put a Stop
 “to the pernicious Practice of common and excessive drinking of Brandy, Geneva, and other Spirituous Liquors, so destructive of the Health, Morals and Industry of our Subjects, and so manifestly injurious to the public Peace and Tranquility; an Act of Parliament was made, &c.”

XII.

In a Letter of the Lords of the Privy Council, written by his Majesty's Command, to the Custodes Rotulorum of the several Counties, and bearing Date March 31, 1743, it is set forth,

“ THAT the excessive drinking of “ Spirituous Liquors has not been pre“ vented by former Acts of Parlia“ ment, but still continues the same;
 “ and it is there complained of, As a “ Custom destructive of the Health, “ Morals, and Industry of his Majes“ ty's Subjects, and to the Peace of “ his Kingdom:”
